As a general theory of individual human behavior and experience, psychoanalytic ideas enrich and are enriched by the study of the biological and social sciences, group behavior, history, philosophy, art, and literature. As a developmental theory, psychoanalysis contributes to child psychology, education, law, and family studies.

Through its examination of the complex relationship between body and mind, psychoanalysis also furthers our understanding of the role of emotions in health as well as in medical illness. As a developmental psychology, it has led to revolutionary changes in child rearing practices, educational methods, and pediatric medicine.

The Student/Resident Associates category has been established to provide educational experiences that will supplement regular academic programs and thus enhance professional training. You now have the opportunity to become affiliated with a leading psychoanalytic organization whose members include some of the most renowned international leaders in psychoanalysis. At the biannual meetings, you will be able to participate in fascinating discussions of cutting edge topics and a wealth of educational programs especially designed for students and led by distinguished scholars in our field.

There are more than 100 discussion groups on subjects such as child and adult development, male and female psychology and sexuality, issues of racial, ethnic and cultural diversity, sexual abuse, neuro-psychoanalysis, and ethics. Other programs provide for the exchange of new ideas and highlight the contribution of psychoanalytic principles in helping to understand important social problems in contemporary life.

APsaA is a multidisciplinary organization; our members include academics, psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, and other mental health professionals as well as scholars and researchers in a variety of academic fields.

We invite medical students, psychiatric residents, social work, psychology, graduate students and undergraduates of all academic disciplines to join the Student/Resident Associates of the American Psychoanalytic Association (APsaA) and participate in the excitement, openness and intellectual liveliness of contemporary psychoanalysis.

For an annual fee of $25 the Student/Resident Associate receives:

- Advance information regarding APsaA meetings
- Discounted registration rates for APsaA meetings
